Pick-pockets get in their work at Nashville, Monday, during the great excitement and reaped a good harvest. Unsuspecting parties were the losers, losing pocket-books, rolls of bills and occasionally a watch. Owing to the jam and excitement the discoveries would not be made until too late to make any arrests.

While the crowd was surging about the Mayfield House at Nashville, Monday, a lady appealed to a young man in the crowd to assist her with a baby as she could not protect it from the surging crowd. He took the baby promptly and is still caring for it, the lady having disappeared almost immediately after getting a protector for her charge.

The Caldwell county contested election case for the Sheriff has been decided in favor of Coleman, democrat, by a majority of five, against Morgan, republican. The return of the election showed a majority of one for Morgan, but the contest reveals the fact that there were six ex-convict votes cast for Morgan, which by a narrow vote out elects Coleman by 5.

A St. Louis man sold to a dealer a very handsome, but rather back-number bedroom suit the other day. The dealer transformed the set and offered it for sale at auction. The original owner purchased it at what seemed a "great bargain for such goods." The bargain illusion was dispelled when his sharp-eyed wife informed him that he bought back his old furniture at an advance of 200 per cent.

A special to the Courier Journal says: Miss Stephen Moore, a widow, aged seventy, was brutally murdered at her residence in Ballard county, Saturday last by unknown parties and robbed of $1,000 in cash. The back part of her skull was crushed and her throat cut from ear to ear. Most of the money belonged to a pedler who made his headquarters with Mrs. Moore and her two grown sons. Fugitive detectives are working on the case.

Last Saturday morning it was wired far and near that a telegraphic communication could be had with Charleston which was so vigorously shaken up by an earthquake a year ago, and it was feared that she had suffered even a severer shake than then, but further investigation located the trouble as being caused by the burning of several telegraph poles near the city which prevented communication for several hours. The usual extravagant exaggerations on imaginary happenings followed and in some sections it was even reported that a portion of the city had sunk under water and that many lives were found to find a watery grave, all of which were entirely without foundation.

The following which appeared in a recent issue of the Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette, was evidently written by one who had been greatly annoyed by exaggerated specials from that state. It says: West Virginia is a small, sparsely-settled mountain state, near Pennsylvania but it has the biggest syndicate of liars that ever imposed upon distant newspapers. Never a day passes that a sensation of some kind is not sent out from it. If all the crimes that are related as happening within its bounds actually took place, one-half the population would be in jail, a quarter would be officers of the law, and the other quarter would be fugitives from justice. If all the discoveries of mineral wealth were true, it would be producing more gold than California, more silver than Nevada, more coal and iron than Pennsylvania, more diamonds than South Africa and more building-stone than the whole New England states. If all the bears, panthers, and wild-cats and snakes do business there that are reported, it would be safer to travel the jungles of Africa than through a West Virginia forest. If all the strange people live there that are said to be the museum of the world would not want for freaks for the next 100 years.

The imprisonment of Attorney General Ayers and two district attorneys at Richmond, Va., for contempt of court, in refusing to obey an order of the United States Circuit Court is an extraordinary proceeding. The offense of the officials is that they continued to bring suits under what is called the "Coupon-crusher" law, after having been forbidden to do so by Judge Bond, the United States Circuit Judge.

The State is the real offender, but being unable to imprison it, Judge Bond jails its law officers. The imprisoned officials will not pay the heavy three assessed against them but will appeal to the United States Supreme Court by way of habeas corpus.

A wonderful protracted prayer-meeting is reported from Ohio county, which closed last Friday. The neighborhood in which the meeting was conducted has no churches and services were conducted at a farmer's house. There were about ninety conversions and fifty of that number have been baptized by a Baptist preacher who attended the meeting the day it closed.

Saved From the Wreck. If the delicate organization of woman gets out of order, prompt application of remedial agents is required to save it from total wreck. In all such cases, whether to assist nature in the discharge of her functions, or to repair damages caused by diseases of special organs, there is no remedy so mild, and yet so effective, as Dr. Pierce's "Female Prescriptions," prepared at the World's Dispensary, at Buffalo, N. Y., and administered for many years to thousands of patients with the happiest results.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8.—The President's trip continues to be a series of memorable incidents, a succession of generous ovations, and to the President himself a revelation of the favor and good-will among the people for the Chief Executive.

The trip has been full of remarkable and invariably pleasing events, in which Cleveland's characteristic "luck" as an important factor, is not overlooked by a few journals. The kindly reception everywhere extended to the President, in which happily politics are ignored and honest approval of honest government rises superior to partisan limits, is but the outward expression of that powerful sentiment among the people, which is quick to applaud good government whether administered by one party or another.

It is no mistake to ascribe to Mr. Cleveland, honesty of purpose and a conscientious desire to conduct the affairs of the country on a non-partisan basis. And if he is handicapped by the inevitable clamors of the politicians, if he is thwarted in the execution of his good purposes by conflicting party interests, he is none the less entitled to the popular credit he is now receiving; and it is this principle which the people recognize, and of which they will always attest their approval. The homage paid to Mrs. Cleveland is unprecedented. It is safe to say that she is the only American with whom the President would be willing to divide the honors now being showered on them. And it is a question as to whether, after all, she is not the greater object of interest.

Her youth, her beauty, her charming manner, all win for her the greatest admiration and esteem. This is a source of much satisfaction to the President, who, with true gallantry and commendable pride, gratefully acknowledges the popularity of his wife.

The Capital is just now the scene of busy preparations for the coming session of Congress. A large force of fresco painters, upholsterers and general cleaners are actively engaged upon the work of the rough renovation. It is expected by the employees of the Senate that there will be many changes in their ranks this winter, owing to the great pressure on Republican Senators for positions. The nearness of the Presidential election creates an extra demand for places and as this is the only place under the government at present under the control of the Republicans, the pressure for places can be imagined. On the House side, the general feeling is that all the principal officers will be re-elected. There is a fight for the position of Doorkeeper, but the present Doorkeeper, it is thought, will win. Of course no one doubts the re-election of Speaker Carlisle.

The report of the Utah Commission recommending the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the institution or the practice of polygamy in any form in the States or Territories or other places over which the United States have exclusive control. It is the opinion of the Commissioners that such an amendment would obviate all necessity for further special or provisional legislation upon a disturbing question, and would insure as a solemn verdict of the American people against the evil. It is not improbable that Congress may find it ultimately inevitable as the only means for the suppression of the practice of polygamy.

The report of Mr. Hubbard, U. S. Minister to Japan, upon the condition of the laboring classes in that country, is interesting as showing the difference in the wages paid Americans and Japanese workmen. The Minister says that good laborers can be hired for from fifteen to twenty cents per day, and they will work from 6 A. M. to 7 P. M., and hoard themselves. The report says that the Japanese authorities discriminate against American enterprises, but the people of Japan trade with Americans by many millions more than with any other nation.

Experienced Army officers are somewhat alarmed over the possibilities of an extensive Indian outbreak in the Northwest, from the nature of the change that has come over the country. It had been confidently predicted, they say, that when the supply of buffalo and other game was exhausted, the Indians would be forced to abandon the warpath permanently, because they would have no means of obtaining an adequate food supply when off the reservation. But in place of the buffalo has come cattle covering the plains in such numbers and so well distributed as to furnish a practically inexhaustible supply. The Northern Indians are fully aware of these favorable conditions, and require very careful treatment to keep them within bounds. It is thought, however, that if the present status quo can be maintained with the arrival of inspectors familiar with the Indian character, the difficulty can be adjusted and peace preserved.

The comments of the Minneapolis Tribune upon the President and Mrs. Cleveland, for which the responsible editor was promptly buried in effigy by the justly indignant citizens of that city, cannot be regarded, even by Mr. Cleveland's political enemies, as unwise, inexcusable, and so far as referring to Mrs. Cleveland, as hostile. The opinion here is that the treatment administered to the unhappy editor, was well-deserved. Adverse criticism upon the President is not surprising, but personal comments upon his wife, in which she is held up to ridicule and her motives in marrying Mr. Cleveland made the subject of vulgar detraction, become a species of slander and abuse which should be resisted by extreme measures of indignation. In Washington, where she is known and appreciated, much indignation is felt that Mrs. Cleveland should have been so unjustly assailed, when in her character as the guest of the people, she should have been exempt from any unfavorable criticism.

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a running, itching, or watery ear.

When it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.

A New Idea.

A majority of the States constituting this great and glorious Union have Democratic Legislatures. Should the worst come to the worst, the Democratic party can pass an amendment to the Constitution legalizing woman suffrage, nominate Mrs. Cleveland for President, admit Dakota to the Union and carry every one of the thirty-nine States.

HEAVEN'S FIRST LAW.

Why Order Can Truly Be Called the Key to Unlimited Happiness. One of the most important lessons of life, and yet so universally overlooked, is order. Through every natural kingdom nothing but order prevails. A definite arrangement of the elements in every material form is sure to be found: the law of crystallization of the rocks is distinctive in every variety; the varied structure of the organic kingdoms all display a harmony of arrangement attractive to every student of nature.

Above all these, the crowning work of the Divine mind, the man, in whom is united these kingdoms, an epitome of the universe—the only creature of God's handwork possessing the independence of free will, the reason dominating the instinct. Yet, strange as it seems, man continually forgets the significance of this all-pervading order; and it does not cease with the universe of worlds, the realm of physics, but more refined in its uses and benefits to humanity, exists in the laws of mental and moral philosophy.

In degree as man comprehends and makes practical this fact, he is made better. Order is the key to unlimited happiness. It is the law of moral gravitation; the fulfillment of which gives us the full stature of a perfect manhood and womanhood.

When called to treat the sick, our measure of hope for restoring the patient depends upon the character of the ailment. Self-possession, even with the child, is the orderly habit and good training, often determines the question of recovery. The neglect produced in the minds of ungovernable children by the necessary treatment of the physician, with the most gentle care, frequently causes a fatal termination. Too often the physician's judicious suggestions for the restoration of his patient are ignored, because the subject has not been taught to yield to moral restraint; every effort to control the case but increases the aberration, until the friends are compelled, helplessly, to watch the drifting down to death. Thousands of precious lives are thus sacrificed annually, not only in the case of children, but as often with adults.

Truly, "Order is Heaven's first law." It begins with the planting of the seed and must continue through every stage of growth, morally and physically, to insure the fullest fruition.

"As the twig is bent the tree is inclined." Good habits, self-possession and forgiveness of self—the only means for the suppression of the practice of polygamy.

MOVABLE BOARD FENCE. One That, with Ordinary Usage, Will Last a Lifetime.

The panels are 15 feet in length, and are made of boards six inches wide and 1 1/2 inches in thickness. Boards of the same thickness, 4 inches wide and 4 feet in length, are used for the uprights. The panels are brought into place, and well clinched, two at each place of contact. Three uprights are used for each length. The bottom board is nailed 15 inches from the ground, and the two other boards are nailed on with 8-inch spacers between the boards, making 4 feet in height. It is set in a straight line, with the panels facing each way alternately, and the uprights locked in place, each other, thus holding all tight together. One suitable stake is driven, one on each side the panels lap, and a cap of common annealed fence-post wire placed tightly around them above the panels; or shorter stakes may be used and the wire passed around the stakes in a spiral, and locked together so as to be easily removed. If poles are made for the stakes with a bar and the stakes driven so as to stand firm, the fence is secured against any ordinary wind; and although only three 6-inch boards are used to the length, it is perfectly safe if set 6 feet away from corn or other grain.

I have used this fence ten years and have had very little repairing to do, although it is set up and removed each year. The panels are drawn to the field on the hay rack—25 rods of fence at a load, and removed on a light snow in November on a sled. With boards only 15 feet in length it is a strong and secure fence. I have never seen a movable fence set up without stakes or other fastening to the ground that was so safe against wind and pushing of cattle. With lumber at $10 per 1,000 feet, the fence costs about 45 cents a rod, and with fair usage will last a lifetime.—Chas. B. Rice, in Country Gentleman.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this remedy, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Novas, 168 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

GREENLAND CROUCHSHIP. How the Village Pastor Brings Loving Youth and Maid Together. The preacher is favorably resorted to, both by young men and maidens, as the matrimonial agent. A young man comes to the missionary house and says to him: "I want to marry."

"Whom?" asks the missionary. "Have you any one in mind?" "Yes," answers the lover, "but she will not have me. I want you to speak to her."

"Have you not spoken for yourself?" "Many times, but she always says 'No.'"

"That is nothing," says the pastor; "you know the way of maidens. Does she like you?" "It is difficult to find out. She will tell you."

The pastor accordingly sends for the girl, who comes willingly enough, knowing what the message means. "Well, my daughter," he observes, "it is time you should think of marriage."

"I never mean to marry," is the invariable and evasive answer. "That is nifty," says the minister, "because I have a good husband for thee."

"Who is he?" she asks. "The missionary then tells her his name—although she knows it as well as he does—and launches out into the lover's praise. He is strong, good looking, kindly; he caught two fine whales when his companions took none, or whatever else can be said to his reputation. After the catalogue of his merits has been recited, the girl replies: "But I think him a good-for-nothing."

"Ah, well," says the missionary, "thou art not wise. There is no lad can fling a harpoon as he can. I shall soon find him a wife."

In then wishes the girl a good day, offering to believe that the interview was sweet. But she is sure to linger, and after a blush and sigh she whispers, "So it is particularly your wish, Herr Pastor? I do not quite like him," with a deep sigh, "but if you—"

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

—Bees should not be allowed to feed honey outside the hive, as it invites robbing, and also causes them to attack people.

—The white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth whipped up with the juice of one lemon and taken half hourly, will relieve hoarseness and soreness of the chest.

—Proaching economy, the New-England Farmer thinks, has become monotonous; yet on the farm, as elsewhere, waste takes more than storms, frosts and insects.

—The droppings from sheep are highly concentrated and should be carefully saved, the best mode of so doing being to mix them with the compost heap.

—If the most in the barrel shows any signs of taint take it out of the barrel, wash in clean water, and put it in new brine, first cleaning the barrel thoroughly.

—Strain butter milk through a sieve to separate it from the butter granules. This is easily done with a harrow, as the sieve is put under the butter milk plug.—Farm Journal.

—Experience is a good teacher, but her rates of tuition are high. Observation is another teacher who can take the place of experience in many cases at much less expense.—Western Plowman.

—When the granary is emptied, clean it out thoroughly and give it all the benefit of air and sunlight that it can have. This should be surely done before the new grain is put in.

—Grasses are the most universally adapted of any of the flowering plants, extending to all portions of the globe, even where the earth is bare of snow only for a few weeks in the year. The grass family includes Indian corn and all of our small grains, as well as those termed grasses by farmers.—The Farmer and Manufacturer.

—No soil without the presence of vegetation matter in some form is, or can be, productive. The presence of vegetable matter—humus—opens the soil, lets in air, permits the free passage of moisture, and hence gets the soil thoroughly aerated. Without this, in a greater or less degree, no field is fruitful.

—Referring to the practice of holding butter in cold storage for a rise in price, the American Cultivator says: "There is very little encouragement for farmers to speculate in butter. In the long run it proves to be the best policy for the producers to sell their butter about as fast as made. It never improves in condition after this point."

It is remarked that "the time to select potato seed is when digging the crop. That like produces like all admit, and it is only reasonable to infer that those hills which are the fullest of desirable potatoes are the ones to save. When the right hill is found save every tuber that is large enough for seed. This method gives the best chance for not only keeping up, but improving the quality of the crop. Breeding from the best is a much more reasonable and promising method than a random selection from the pile at sorting time. The best hills are discovered only at harvest time, and then is the only time they can be selected for seed."—St. Louis Republic.
